Country Club blaze claims firefighter's life

A Mid-Valley Fire Department fireman died and another firefighter was badly injured Wednesday in a tragic fire that destroyed a condominium unit in Carmel Valley.

Mark Worley, 32, Route 2, Carmel Valley, was dead on arrival at 6:40 p.m. Wednesday at Community Hospital where he was rushed by the fire department rescue unit.

An autopsy was scheduled for today by Monterey County Deputy Coroner Fred Brandstetter.

Injured in the fire was Sidney Pryor, a resident of the Robinson Canyon area and the daughter of Pat Richards, Carmel Valley.

Mrs. Pryor was admitted to the intensive care unit of Community Hospital with burns on her arms and hands and lacerations resulting from shattered glass when she jumped through a second story window to escape the fire.

She was reported in fair condition at the hospital this morning and was expected to be transferred later today from the intensive care ward. Both Worley and Mrs. Pryor had been with the department since it began operations about two years ago.

Both were fully trained in firefighting and as Emergency Medical Technicians, according to Edgar Haber, a fire commissioner for the Mid-Valley Fire Department.

Haber is also president of the Carmel Golf and Country Club, where the fire occurred in the Town House condominium section on Carmel Valley Rd. and Valley Greens Drive.

"The heat was as intense as any I've ever seen," Haber said, describing the fire scene after the call was received by Mid-Valley at 5:40 p.m. Wednesday.

Haber said the blaze had apparently "been smoldering for hours," probably in the second level of the three-story building where the living room, den and kitchen were located.

Unit 19, the site of the tragedy, was unoccupied at the time the fire broke out and firemen managed to keep the fire from spreading to two adjoining units.

"The heat was so intense that furnishings on other floors were melted," Haber noted.

He said Worley was apparently trapped near the stairs "on the lower level" of the building. His body was removed from the unit by several firemen who entered through a rear exit.

"We don't know if there was an explosion or not," Haber commented, noting that may be determined by investigators.

Realizing that Mrs. Pryor was also trapped in the

New Fire Chief Bill Sims honored at Valley reception

A quick smile and a sincere concern for educating department members to meet state requirements and for the protection of residents in the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District won many new friends for personable Bill Sims, who was honored with a "Get Acquainted With Our New Fire Chief Reception" hosted by the Valley Volunteers.

"Baptism by fire," an antiquated expression, seems a fitting description for Chief Sims's first month in the Valley which was threatened by the Marble-Cone fire. The chief must now formulate immediate plans for possible winter floods.

When not attending meetings on these two vital issues he has been establishing priorities for the department's future, the first of which will be revitalizing the Emergency Medical Technician training program. He was active in developing a similar project in Pacific Grove and, with the friendship of key people at the instruction level, hopes to be able to offer classes which will certify personnel from the Mid-Valley and Carmel Valley stations. The classes hopefully will be held in the Village to eliminate the long drive to MPC.

A ten-year veteran with the Pacific Grove department where he advanced from engineer to captain, Chief Sims earned an A. S. degree in fire science at Monterey Peninsula College in 1975.

He served four years with the U. S. Air Force. He and his wife, Ida, are parents of a 12-year-old son, Sean, and a daughter, Robyn, who is ten.

Walter Mondale guest speaker at Citizens for Panetta luncheon

The Hollywood film title Guess Who's Coming to Dinner? precedes the exciting announcement from Citizens for Panetta who are inviting residents of the 16th Congressional District to meet and hear Vice President Walter F. Mondale at a fund-raising luncheon on Saturday, Oct. 8, 11 a.m. at the Monterey Conference Center. Said Representative Leon Panetta, "It's a great honor to welcome the Vice President to our area, and we're hoping for a good turnout of friends and supporters." The Valleyite has known Mondale since his days as a Senate aide in the late 1960s.

Mrs. Dale (Gail) Buche is chairman of the October affair and invites those who wish to attend the luncheon, which begins at 11 a.m., to mail their reservations, at $35 each, to Citizens for Panetta, P.O. Box 903, Carmel Valley, Calif. 93924, or contact Gail for further information at 659-5298.

A sculptress and artist, she taught arts and crafts to other patients and organized several booths where the patients could display and sell their wares.

'Basic Skills' testing rates Carmel students high

By JULIE HANDGEN

YOUNGSTERS in Carmel elementary schools may be smarter than their peers on a national level, and Middle School students are virtual Whiz Kids.

That was the gist of a report heard by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education at the Sept. 13 regular meeting.

Results of the Comprehensive Tests of Basic Skills given to CUSD students in grades 1-5 and grade 8 last spring were reviewed by Dr. Richard Hawkins, director of pupil personnel services.

Board members and more than a dozen parents who attended the session were told by Dr. Hawkins that the "test results were highly positive."

The results show eighth graders scoring considerably higher in basic skills (for their grade) than the elementary students, but Dr. Hawkins explained that the older students had a two-month learning advantage.

(The tests are administered nationwide to youngsters from a wide variety of cultural, ethnic and economical backgrounds.)

THE SKILLS TESTS were administered to grades 1-5 last March and to grade 8 in May, in the areas of reading, language and mathematics.

In reading skills, 75 per cent of the elementary students scored above the national median; in both language and math, 66 per cent scored above it.

At the eighth grade level, 81 per cent scored above the national average in reading, 72 per cent above in language and 82 per cent above in math.

In discussing those who scored below the national median, Dr. Hawkins pointed out that testing can be influenced by intangible factors.

"There are always a few who score low because they just didn't feel good that day, or maybe their dog died the day before, or they simply put their answers on the wrong page," Hawkins said.

When queried about the lack of standardized testing at the high school level, Hawkins said there was no clear reason, except that because of the number of elective courses, dissemination and evaluation of data might be difficult.

Also, that the nationally standardized tests are designed to measure those skills among younger students which are prerequisite to studying and learning in subject matter courses.

The standardized tests are required each year by the State of California. The results are used by the state and school districts to evaluate textbooks and educational programs.

The CTBS batteries are published by CTB/McGraw-Hill, Monterey. They are used nationwide.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, the board received a preview of the District Course of Study for Kindergarten through grade 5, an outline compiled during the past several months under the direction of Dr. Vance Frasier, principal of River School.

The curriculum guidelines are currently being printed, and the 80-page booklets will be distributed to all parents and faculty in the CUSD in about two weeks.

Dr. Frasier commended the efforts of parents who worked with the faculty in preparing and updating the elementary curriculum guidelines.

Dr. Frasier noted that he was impressed with the "insight" shown by interested parents into how a planned curriculum should be drafted.

"I think educators have sometimes evaded their responsibility by throwing in too much," he said.

Dr. Harris A. Taylor, superintendent, predicted the brochures will aid both students and parents who study the guidelines to see what educational goals are expected.

The course of study contains the general goals for each subject; the specific learning expectancies for each subject, by grade level; a description of the management system used for keeping track of the child's progress in reading, language arts and mathematics; and a list of teaching and learning materials available to the teacher and student.

IN A REPORT on enrollment for the opening of the 1977-78 school season, Dr. Taylor said the total number of students registered in CUSD is 2,996, down slightly from the projected enrollment of 3,091.

The total enrollment at the beginning of the 1976-77 year was 3,143.

The downturn was expected, according to the superintendent, who said he expects enrollment to gain by the end of October.

OTHER ACTION by the board included approval of four new teachers for the district and the acceptance of three resignations by instructors.

Hired as temporary language arts teacher for the 1977-78 school year at Middle School was Fran Kitts, Pacific Grove, at a salary of $11,600.

Jean Agan, Carmel, was also hired as a language arts teacher at Middle School, on a temporary two-fifths time basis for the current school year, at a salary of $4,664.40.

Hired as language arts teacher at Carmel High School on a temporary basis for this year was Ethelyne Hughes, Monterey, at a salary of $18,422.

Jim Helgason, Monterey, was hired for a "contract" position at the high school for this year at a salary of $11,661.

Helgason will be in charge of special education classes for 11 children in the district in grades 7-12, who live in foster homes.

The term "contract" position refers to a position dependent on state or federal funding for annual renewal.

In his letter of resignation, Doug Corce, teacher of special education at Middle and Valley schools for the past four years, explained that "the economics of this area have made it impossible for my family and me to live the type of lifestyle we desire."

He said he has accepted a position at Ponderosa High School in El Dorado County, working with handicapped students.

Corce has already moved from the area, according to Dr. Robert Whitehead, assistant superintendent of instruction and personnel.

Dr. Whitehead said following the meeting he "very much regretted" Corce's resignation, referring to him as a fine teacher.

"It's getting to be a bigger problem all the time," Whitehead remarked about Corce's statement concerning the "economics" of the area.

He said the increased cost of housing seems to be the primary complaint of teachers in the district, that "salaries have not kept pace with living costs."

Also accepted were the resignations of Jody Conley, teacher in the Early Childhood Education Program at River School, a position to be terminated at the end of next year; and Barrie Hart, reading and language arts teacher at Middle School, who has accepted the position of vice principal at MacGregor Junior High School, Newark, N.J.

The board accepted a gift of $150 from the Northern California Savings and Loan Association to the Barracuda Swim Club.

The next regular meeting will be Sept. 27.

Producer Alan Gilbert premieres 'Oklahoma!' at new Barnyard Theatre

By JULIE HANDGEN

WHEN YOU'VE SHARED footlights with Mary Martin, played the Desert Inn in Las Vegas and dined at Buckingham Palace, what can you do for an encore?

For Alan Gilbert, the next performance is center stage in Carmel when the curtain rises on opening night at the new Carmel Barnyard Theatre, Highway 1 and Rio Rd., on Saturday, Sept. 17 at 8:30 p.m.

Drawing on his lengthy career as an actor, singer and performing-arts instructor, Gilbert has launched an innovative theatre concept in the area.

Gilbert and his wife, Barbara, and three daughters, Giuletta, 20, Suzanne, 18, and Elisa, 12, came to Carmel two years ago and moved to Pebble Beach three months ago.

At a luncheon interview last week the producer of the Barnyard Theatre reminisced about his early days in show business and his plans for the future.

GILBERT STUDIED for a year at the Juilliard School in New York City before he joined a road show with the U.S. Army in the 1940s.

Then it was back to New York, where he lucked into his first real break and met another young actor who would become a close friend.

"I was still in uniform," Gilbert recalled, "standing at 51st and Broadway. I saw a lot of people milling around and asked what was happening."

The person he asked was the late Jack Cassidy, who urged him to queue up for auditions in the road company production of Something for the Boys, starring Ethel Merman.

"We got in line, were both hired on the spot," Gilbert said, "and spent the next six months on tour."

The friendship between Gilbert and Cassidy lasted much longer than the show tour; like many aspiring but impoverished actors, they decided to split the rent on a flat in Manhattan for a couple of years.

Gilbert has nothing but praise for Cassidy's talent, but admits the dimpled actor had such a colossal ego that he often spent three hours a day in front of the mirror in the West 55th St. apartment, arranging his "pompador" hairstyle.

GILBERT WAS ALSO in the cast of Bloomer Girl, with Celeste Holm, and then had a succession of chorus and bit parts.

There was a major breakthrough when he was hired as understudy to the lead in Finian's Rainbow.

He was later given the leading role in the production for a year with the London company and then came home to star in the musical on Broadway.

Gilbert fondly remembers his stay in England, particularly a "command performance" for the royal family in 1947.

His acquaintance with British royalty included a "couple of dates" with Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret, before the older daughter succeeded King George VI to the throne.

"Of course, dating royalty is a bit out of the ordinary," he conceded; "we were always accompanied by the Palace Guard. I did get to the races at Ascot, though, and had dinner once at Buckingham Palace."

A lot of summer stock was next on the agenda for Gilbert, who describes stock companies as the best method for actors to learn their craft.

A memorable summer was spent appearing with Carol Burnett in Threepenny Opera, he noted.

IN 1949, one of the most beloved musicals of all time, South Pacific, opened on Broadway and Gilbert was part of the original cast with Mary Martin and Ezio Pinza.

He counted 1,038 performances before bowing out for an engagement at the new Desert Inn in Las Vegas.

On Broadway, Gilbert played the young lieutenant, singing such hits as There Is Nothing like a Dame; a few years later — last summer — he starred in the Pinza role in South Pacific at the Cannery Row Dinner Theatre.

Prior to accepting a new role as director of the opera workshop at Arizona State University in Phoenix in 1962, Gilbert appeared in productions of A Tree Grows in Brooklyn, Most Happy Fella and Green Willow in New York.

HE FOUND HIS OWN leading lady, Barbara, a native Californian, in Manhattan, where she was employed in 1953 as art director and in public relations for Glamour magazine.

He was producing commercials and hired her to design a record jacket. Business led to love, and the couple soon eloped to Massachusetts.

Gilbert is quick to name actresses he respects and likes — Shirley Booth, Mary Martin, Nanette Fabray, Celeste Holm, Betty Garrett — but gallantly declines mention of temperamental stars.

Directors he has enjoyed working with include Josh Logan, Jerry Robbins and George Abbott.

Appearances with operas in Zurich and San Francisco are another part of Gilbert's resume, and since 1964 he has served full time on the faculty of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Gilbert's opera career has been illustrious: he has played with, as he says, "nearly ever opera company on the West Coast, including Honolulu."

During the 1969 season, his roles with the San Francisco Opera included Marcello in La Boheme and the Count in La Traviata.

While residing in Zurich, Switzerland, during the 1970-71 season, Gilbert sang Scarpia in Tosca and the role of Gianni Schicchi in the opera by the same name.

He was also artist-in-residence with the UCLA Opera Company for several years before becoming a full-time faculty member.

ALAN AND BARBARA GILBERT take an intermission while putting the finishing touches on the new Carmel Barnyard Theatre at Highway 1 and Rio Rd., scheduled for a champagne premiere, Saturday, Sept. 17 at 8:30 p.m. The opening production, directed by Gilbert, will be "Oklahoma!" Gilbert's career in the theatre includes acting, singing in opera and teaching theatre arts. (Photo by Del Kaller)

From Broadway to Valley; starts new career as producer

Now, at the Barnyard Theatre, which is fully accredited by the University of California at Santa Cruz, Extension Division, Gilbert plans not only to present plays and musicals year 'round, but also to showcase local talent from the Peninsula.

Each show will be followed by a one-and-a-half-hour cabaret format starring local singers, musicians, dramatists and dancers. Beer and wine and snacks will be available.

The Barnyard Theatre School, to open this fall, will offer students instruction in singing, acting and dancing and the chance to combine their talents in a repertory company.

The Barnyard Theatre will premiere Sept. 17 with a champagne production of Oklahoma! with proceeds to benefit the theatre's own workshop scholarship program and the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble.

The cabaret to follow will highlight the talents of Gilbert, Fred Weiss, LaVonne Rae Andrews and Jane Strauch.

'Fantasticks' on stage

The Jamesburg Players' production of The Fantasticks is on stage Friday and Saturday evenings at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center on Ford Road in Carmel Valley Village. Curtain is at 8:30 p.m.

The Fantasticks, a modern-day Romeo and Juliet tale, is a blend of satire and romance, bright comedy and serious verse. The Jamesburg Players' production uses a small cast and simple settings to create its own world through music and words. The longest-running production in the history of musical theatre, The Fantasticks includes songs like Try to Remember and Soon It's Gonna Rain.

Opening of the production was delayed because several of the players who live in the Jamesburg area of Carmel Valley were forced to evacuate their homes during the Marble-Cone forest fire.

The Jamesburg Players is a group of residents of the Upper Carmel Valley/Jamesburg area who are trying to raise money to build a school for their children, who must ride buses for many hours each day to reach local schools. Their previous productions include Oklahoma! and Guys and Dolls.

For reservations and additional information, phone 659-4715.

Local girl scouts plan replanting

The Monterey Bay Girl Scout Council is working with the Department of Forestry and other government agencies to determine what actions will minimize flood damage this winter in Carmel Valley, Arroyo Seco and Big Sur.

They plan to unite concerned citizens in an effort to replant burned areas.

Camp Cawatre, the Girl Scout resident camp in Arroyo Seco, was evacuated during the early stages of the Marble-Cone fire, and the Scouts donated it to firefighters to use as a base.

Division of Forestry crews saved the center of the 28-acre camp by back-firing. The Scouts hope to save the camp from winter flooding.

Camp Cawatre opened in 1936 and was operated jointly by Campfire Girls and Girl Scouts until 1958, when the Scouts assumed sole responsibility for its operation.

THE ORIGINAL CAST of the Broadway hit "South Pacific" included Alan Gilbert, third from right, producer of the new Carmel Barnyard Theatre, which will open Sept. 17. Gilbert started in the chorus of the musical and later assumed the role of Lt. Joe Cable.

'Greenpeace' crew sails to save whales

By JULIE HANDGEN

SPERM AND KILLER whales prefer rock-and-roll and bluegrass music, and dolphins are turned on by Brahms.

Just ask Mel Gregory, one of 27 crew members of the James Bay, a chartered former Canadian minesweeper on patrol to save the giant mammals along California's coast.

Mel has been with the crew and the Greenpeace Foundation for the past four years and claims it was music that guided him to the antiwhaling crusade.

The James Bay churned out of Monterey Bay early Wednesday morning after the crew had a week's furlough on the Peninsula, which included a fund-raising benefit Sunday at the Mission Ranch, Carmel.

A musician himself — he plays the guitar — Mel said he heard a record some years ago called Songs of the Humpback Whale.

"The sounds were unbelievable," he exclaimed. "I thought, wow! We can't do this, not in any way."

"The whales can sing with three separate voices at the same time — in perfect harmony. That's their way of communicating. It's beautiful!"

The James Bay and crew will make their next stop in Los Angeles, where a benefit will be staged at the Hollywood Bowl featuring numerous celebrities dedicated to the Greenpeace cause.

MEL BELIEVES the voyages have been successful, but plans to remain with the crew until the overkill stops, "probably later this year."

He explained that the International Whaling Commission has cut the whaling quota from 7,000 this year to 700 for 1978, a number he thinks will discourage whalers.

Mel Gregory, a native of Vancouver, B.C., loves whales. It's obvious as he recounts how the crew entertained the whales with musical selections.

"They are incredibly intelligent," he says of the whales, and wonders why the Russians, for example, can't understand the importance of conserving the mammals.

"They (the Russians) have banned taking dolphins from the Red Sea and have declared them 'comrades' because of their intelligence," he notes with raised eyebrows.

"But," he emphasizes, "the whale is much more intelligent. A whale has a 19-pound brain; they can communicate with each other from thousands of miles away."

MEL SAYS that long ago the ages of whales could be determined by the number of wax plugs in their ears, and 100-year-old sperm whales were not rare.

The whaling overkill has resulted, however, in a much younger and smaller whale population.

"Sperm whales used to grow to 80 feet, but now most of those taken are only about 20 feet long, barely old enough to breed," Mel said.

"For 50 million years there were 5 million whales, and they did not overpopulate the waters. There are probably fewer than 300,000 now of all species," he pointed out.

BREACHING THE WAVES in this drawing is a California gray whale, the best known and most often seen of any of the great whales that migrate along the Pacific Coast. Residents and visitors to the Carmel area can look for the herds in December, January and February as they travel past the Peninsula from the Arctic to warm Mexican waters. They can be sighted on the return trip from mid-March to mid-May. The gray whale is one of many species protected by the Greenpeace Foundation, recently docked in Monterey Bay. (Drawing by Paul B. Johnson; Department of Fish and Game's publication "Outdoor California")

Broader shoulders slated for Carmel Valley Road

Carmel Valley Rd. will have broader "shoulders" by Sept. 21, the scheduled completion date for a road improvement project underway between Via Petra and Valley Greens Drive.

The Monterey District Crew of the Monterey County Department of Public Works has been widening the shoulders on Carmel Valley Rd. since Tuesday, Sept. 13.

Fifth District Supervisor Sam Farr said the construction is "part of a continuing effort to provide a safer roadway along Carmel Valley Rd. for motor vehicles and bicycles."

Traffic using the road during the widening project will be subject to control by flagmen. There may be short delays.

building, Haber said firemen gathered under the window to break her fall when she jumped from the unit.

Worley was an engineer fireman with the Mid-Valley department for the past 18 months and a volunteer prior to that.

He lived directly behind the fire station where he and his wife, Linda, operated a succulent farm. They had no children.

Worley was born April 9, 1945, in San Jose. He had resided in the Valley for the past four years.

His father, Delbert Worley, Salinas, survives, along with a sister, Mrs. Debby Mitchel, San Jose. His mother preceded him in death. Mr. Worley was a veteran of the U.S. Armed Forces.

Funeral services are in charge of Mission Mortuary,

Monterey.

Twenty paid and volunteer firefighters responded to the call Wednesday from the Mid-Valley station and they were backed by five personnel from the Carmel Valley Fire Department.

Two engines and two rescue units were also used during the evening, according to Haber, who estimated the extent of damage to the unit at approximately $50,000.

Thursday morning Valley fire personnel, including Mid-Valley Chief Ron Zeise, were conferring with insurance representatives and conducting a comprehensive investigation, Haber reported.

Worley's death was the first firefighter fatality since Carmel Valley Fire Department Capt. Don Laird died of a heart attack while battling a brush fire in the Valley about three years ago, Haber recalled.

Music in Carmel schools

By SCOTT MACCLELLAND

CARMEL'S VIGOROUS cultural life may, ironically, conceal the seeds of its own destruction. The tender trap is the discrepancy between the enjoyment of cultural events and the teaching of such values to the next generation. While such a discrepancy exists in Carmel it is, fortunately, not large. For while artistic activities are heavily loaded in favor of adults, the Carmel Unified School District offers its students one of the better programs in the county for arts participation and stimulation.

One of the most exciting projects CUSD has developed for student participation is the School of Performing Arts, a summer school course of six weeks' duration which has just completed, with great success, its second year in the curriculum. The School of Performing Arts is modeled on a similar project in one of the Stockton, California, school districts and was initiated locally by Betty Bell and Lucretia Butler. The project allows student participation in all aspects of theatre and this summer produced Little Mary Sunshine and You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown. At the present time the school is open without tuition to any student in the entire area who would like to enroll.

TO GET A REALISTIC overview of CUSD's music program is to see it from the same direction as the ascending student, because the foundation for the high school music projects is laid in the elementary schools. Like most school districts in the county, music is taught in earnest in Carmel beginning with the 4th grade. Instrumental music is then offered right up through high school.

The strings follow a unique path as compared with the other instrumental groups. The strings start strong in grade 4 and develop well through grade 6, which usually boasts a small performing string ensemble. But with grade 7 the strings abruptly fade away. This is not a trend peculiar to the Carmel District. It takes longer for string students to be ready for performance, due to the nature of string instruments, and the strings are still heavily oriented to the classical tradition.

By contrast, the winds, brass and percussion are the mainstay of bands, which are ready to perform sooner, play more contemporary and popular music, and also offer the romance and excitement of travel to foreign lands, like Monterey and Pacific Grove.

IT WAS BECAUSE of string attrition and a consequential interruption of student participation in orchestral music and its literature that the Monterey Peninsula Youth Orchestra was formed. Now entering its fifth year, the orchestra is sustained by the mutual efforts of the Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove school districts. The project was founded by Carmel School Superintendent Dr. Harris Taylor, who continues as its titular administrator.

At Carmel High School are the Concert Band, the Marching Band (for the football season), the Pep Band (for basketball) and the Stage Band, which is more jazz-oriented and plays in the spring variety show. The high school also has a strong choral program which has enjoyed a recent resurgence under the enthusiastic leadership of Tina Paradiso.

YOUNG GARY CONDON, a student at Tularcitos School in Carmel Valley, takes a deep breath before blowing into a tuba that winds around his body.

ADDITIONAL MUSIC opportunities include high school participation in the Tri-County Honor Orchestra, Band and Choir, and chances to compete for the All State performing groups sponsored by the California Music Educators Association. High school students who are accomplished orchestral players may also gain student participation with the Monterey County Symphony.

And, as with all the districts of the county, the Monterey County Symphony provides its in-school instrumental demonstrations to the 4th and 5th graders in Carmel, as well as the annual Symphony Concerts for Youth.

IT IS POSSIBLE to live in Carmel for years and remain totally oblivious to music in our schools. Fortunately, our school administrators are aware of this and have made continuing strides to keep their music program strong. According to Carmel School's Assistant Superintendent, Robert Whitehead, "Our music program is better than adequate, but we can do more and are planning to do more."

The performance events that result from the music programs in the Carmel district are focused into December and May. One thing the district might consider to further strengthen its arts programs is to make a greater effort to bring the results of these programs to the attention of the community. A greater publicity effort could be a strong hedge against the cultural discrepancy mentioned at the beginning of this column.

HORSES can have drinking problems.

I have a horse with a drinking problem. Should I send him to AA meetings? Unfortunately, it's not as simple as that. His problem isn't with beer, wine, whiskey or even champagne. It's with water.

El Pluggo's drinking problem isn't that he drinks too much. He doesn't get stoned in his stony pasture or make an ass of himself

Count Basie to open Jazz Festival

Count Basie and His Orchestra will headline the Basically Blues Friday evening concert of the 20th Annual Monterey Jazz Festival, Friday-Sunday, Sept. 16-18 in the 7,000-seat Pattee Arena of the Monterey County Fairgrounds, Fairgrounds and Garden Rds., Monterey.

Also on the program for the opening concert is the premiere of Happy Birthday, Monterey Suite by Gerald Wilson, who will conduct the Airmen of Note, the official U. S. Air Force jazz band. The Ted Curson Quartet and Joe Williams are also on the concert program.

The five concerts in the festival begin at 9 p.m. Friday; 1:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday afternoons; 8:15 p.m. Saturday evening; and 7:15 p.m. Sunday evening.

Tickets remain for all concerts except the Saturday matinee. All seats are reserved, with no grounds-only admission. Tickets may be purchased at the Fairgrounds gate or in advance from the Fairgrounds box office.

at parties. He drinks too little.

He's all right at home. Stands peacefully drinking from his own water tank with his ears twitching at each swallow. Raises a dripping muzzle to swallow one last time over me, thereby releasing a full mouthful of used water. Obviously no problem there.

But let us go anywhere or do anything outside his own pasture? I like to go over to my friend's house and ride in her riding ring and jump her jumps and generally let it all hang out. We work up quite a sweat and quite a thirst for root beer or whatever's going. El Pluggo stands there reproachfully cutting short my root beer time. He won't drink root beer. And he won't drink strange water.

I've explained to him that the water at home and the water down the road is all from our friendly Cal-Am Water Co., but he is not impressed. He will not drink until he is home again.

I like to ride to Garland Park going up Encina Road to the south entrance, over the Grande Mesa, and down to the meadow by the visitor's center where those fallen silvered trees rest on lovely sandy footing — an invitation to gallop and jump. At the visitor's center, there is a drinking fountain and lately there has been a bucket for watering horses.

"Look, El Pluggo," I exclaimed the day I found the bucket set out for public use. "Some kindly soul is thinking about thirsty dogs and horses." I filled it for him. He would not drink. It was not HIS bucket.

Still dry, we shlepped back up over Grande Mesa. Gee, I hope that someday a riverfront trail will be opened to Garland Ranch Regional Park to make an easier trek for dry horses.

We like to go on ETL trail rides; they have one or two every month. This Saturday, it's a beach ride starting at 10 a.m. from Potrero Rd. in Moss Landing. Equestrian Trails rides are very gentle, all-walking rides. But sometimes El Pluggo comes back looking like he's just done a 100-mile endurance race. His flanks draw up into ugly ridges of muscle. His back cords. He won't drink until he's loaded into a trailer and taken home.

I've tried sweetening his water with molasses at home and then away from home. He'll drink it at home. Away from home he sniffs the water, licks his lips, sniffs the water again and knocks the bucket over with his head.

The dry condition doesn't seem to hurt him. The tucked up condition looks very ugly but it goes away overnight at home with no after effects. El Pluggo does not seem to be in any pain. It seems to be in the same category as a child that holds its breath to get its own way.

I know from going on extended campouts that, at long last, El Pluggo will reluctantly drink from strange buckets and of foreign water. He may be masochistic but he's not suicidal.

Possibly we don't understand water metabolism in horses as well as in other animals. I remember my uncle's dairy farm in Michigan. Those cows spent all day and all night in a pasture with no water. When they came up to be milked twice a day they drank at the barnyard water tank. My uncle made his living from selling liquid milk, but he didn't worry over pumping the cows full of liquid to increase his income.

I have noticed that horses in pasture also drink surprisingly little at certain times. It depends on what they're eating and on the external temperature. Cool days reduce the need for water. Certain feeds must also metabolize with a higher water content than others. Water is a by product in the digestion of carbohydrates. Water seems to be more important to the horse in terms of electrolyte balance than digestion.

Laureles Farm Boarding Stable had a broken pipe last week. Water was hand carried to all the horses until it was repaired. One horse would only drink if his beloved owner watered him. Picky. Picky. El Pluggo would understand: "You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink."

Letta from Panetta

Plans to avert second disaster

By LEON PANETTA
Congressman, 12th District

THE EFFECTS of the longstanding drought in our area have been felt in many ways, but none more dramatic than the recent Marble-Cone fire which ravaged nearly 200,000 acres of our prime wilderness land.

The most visible consequence of the fire has been the blackening of most of the scenic Ventana Wilderness in the Los Padres National Forest. Of more urgent importance, however, has been the massive destruction of vital watershed throughout the area. The dense vegetation which normally covers this terrain provides protection from excessive runoff or erosion during the rainy season. With this vegetation burned away, the consequences for downstream areas could be severe.

In order to take adequate precautions for a possible flood or other emergency situation, a full scale effort has been undertaken in the affected areas of Monterey County. I have been working closely with local officials and property owners in these areas since the fire first broke out to assist in coordinating emergency plans.

The initial cost estimates for rehabilitation and flood prevention work are staggering. The work required within the Los Padres Forest itself is expected to cost approximately $1.5 million, while work on outside land and streams could run as high as $5 million.

The National Forest Service has already begun an extensive reseeding effort in the burned area and will be employing the necessary flood-prevention measures on Forest Service lands. However, the remaining work will have to be funded from other sources.

I HAVE PROVIDED Monterey County officials, affected property owners and the public with an outline of federal assistance programs which are available to help in the planning. These programs are designed for both flood prevention and disaster assistance in the event of flooding. All of us hope, of course, that much of this assistance will not be needed. However, because of the dangerous conditions which exist, I believe we must develop contingency plans for any possible emergency.

The areas which have been hardest hit are the watersheds which feed the Big Sur, Carmel and Arroyo Seco Rivers. The immediate measures which need to be taken include the clearing of dead trees, brush and other obstacles in order to reduce the amount of floating debris. Other possible precautions would be the deepening of selected portions of the river channels and the construction of "debris dams" or other devices to reduce the velocity of the oncoming water should heavy storms occur.

As I have noted, the cost of this work will be high. But unless the proper precautions are taken, the potential cost in lives and property could be substantially higher.

Even the most drastic measures will be of little use if we experience particularly severe weather in the early fall. In the event that the worst should occur, the county is developing extensive pre-flood warning and evacuation plans for local residents. In addition, I will be working to ensure that all available federal assistance programs are ready to be put into action to aid those who might sustain property damage.

THE NATURAL FORCES which combined to produce the Marble-Cone fire were well beyond our control. However, in the aftermath of this tragic blaze I believe there are lessons we can learn which may help prevent a future fire from reaching similar proportions.

In July, the House Interior Committee adopted two amendments which I co-authored to allow the Forest Service to take limited fire-prevention and watershed-protection measures within newly designated wilderness areas. The Ventana and Santa Lucia areas of the Los Padres National Forest are among a number of areas throughout the country that would be given wilderness status under the Endangered American Wilderness Act which is currently under consideration.

Although I support the goal of protecting these areas, I also believe a wilderness designation must be coupled with adequate measures to protect against another massive fire. The amendments which the committee has adopted will allow the Forest Service to develop a management plan for both fire prevention and watershed protection in the wilderness areas. I believe that this kind of approach will not only preserve the scenic quality of these lands, but protect them from future destruction as well.

The repercussions of the Marble-Cone fire will be felt in our area for many years. Our task at this point is to take all possible precautions to minimize the danger of a post-fire disaster, and to prevent a fire of these proportions from occurring again in the future.

EIR recommended for Vista Robles

An Environmental Impact Report is recommended by the Monterey County Planning Department if the proposed Vista Robles preliminary subdivision in Carmel Valley is approved Sept. 20 by the board of supervisors.

The supervisors will be asked to overrule an Aug. 24 decision of the county planning commission which found the proposal inconsistent with the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

There will be a public hearing on the appeal from the planning commission decision as requested by Charles Fisher, developer.

The proposed single-family residential subdivision is located about a mile and a half into Hitchcock Canyon behind Robles Del Rio in Carmel Valley Village and specifies 2 1/2-acre lots for homes.

The tract is in an unclassified district, but planners determined the plans were inconsistent with the Master Plan, which establishes the area as suitable for wildlife grazing and as a watershed, according to David Young, senior planner.

Young said the preliminary plans call for approximately eight homes to be built on the 28-acre tract.

He explained that the planning staff feels that if the supervisors overturn the consistency ruling of the commission, an EIR should be ordered as the next phase of the project.
